

BORDLEY GUILTY OF BOOTLEGGING, JURY DECISION

His Excuse of Merely Cashing Check Of Cabinet Maker Hess Fails to Impress.

Steve Bordley, colored, Race Horse alley, acquitted of a liquor charge here last November, found the tables turned on him in court today when a jury returned a verdict of guilty on charges of illegal possession and sale of intoxicating liquor.

The jury was given the case at 11 o'clock. A decision was reached over the noon recess, but the jury was not polled until after 2 o'clock this afternoon, pending the giving of the case of Leroy Bailey, also colored, Race Horse alley, charged with illegal possession of intoxicating liquor, to a jury.

Charles Hess, local cabinet maker, was the principal witness for the commonwealth in the prosecution of Steve Bordley. He testified to having purchased liquor at Steve's barber shop on three different occasions, on one of which he gave the colored man a check for $5. Bordley's defense was that he had merely been asked by Hess to cash the check for him and that he had not sold Hess any liquor.

Bordley was represented by C. W. A. Roehow, York, and J. Donald Swope assisted J. P. Butt, district attorney, with the prosecution.

The jurors in the Bordley case were Walter Crouse, Elmer B. Lau, C. B. Lerew, Oliver Fissel, John Marshall, J. D. Ernst, Harry S. Bream, H. C. Bream, G. D. Wagner, John C. Derr and A. G. Crist.

The jurors in the Bailey case were S. Allen Swartz, H. B. Sefton, George Raftersperger, R. P. Spangler, Ira Sharras, L. C. Pittenturf, A. M. Robert, E. K. Gardner, James R. Gilbert, H. F. Doderer, R. K. Stultz and William M. Musser.

Bailey's case went to trial as soon as the Bordley jury retired, and was concluded at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Indictments charging Charles Baker and Ellis Baker with illegal transportation and possession of intoxicating liquor were called to trial as soon as Bailey's jury retired.

Odd Fellows Hear A Special Sermon

"The Bonds of Fellowship and Faith" was the theme of a sermon by the Rev. J. Harold Little, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran church, Straban township, at a service at St. James Lutheran church here, Sunday evening, when members of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and Mary Gettys Rebekah lodge attended as special guests.

The service commemorated the founding of Odd Fellowship in the United States 107 years ago.

The speaker, who took his text from Philomen 1:10, said the idea of fellowship, which forms the basis of Odd Fellowship and other lodges, was predicated upon a belief in God and a love for Jesus Christ.

Special musical numbers, including a vocal solo by Clyde Decker, of near Caledonia, were given during the service.

The church was crowded for the occasion, a special section having been reserved for the Odd Fellows and the Rebekahs.

Owner of Dead Tree Wins Court Case; Autoist Asked Damages When It Fell on Him

Buena Vista Springs Hotel Company Had No Way Of Knowing It Was Decayed And Would Injure Motorist, Judge Holds.

The Buena Vista Springs Hotel Company, of Washington township, Franklin county, beyond Charming, has been held not liable for damages for permitting a dead tree to stand near a road on its property, where there was nothing to indicate the tree was decayed or in danger of falling and injuring a motorist, which it did.

W. Rush Gillan, until recently president judge of the Franklin County Court of Common Pleas, decided the case and has written an interesting opinion on the duties of the owner of a dead tree.

Opinion Of Judge
In his opinion, Judge Gillan says: "The defendant maintains and operates a hotel in Washington township in this county. Said hotel is located on the lands of the defendant. The drives or roads by which said hotel can be reached by those driving the same run from different directions toward the hotel. No one can reach the hotel by driving except by passing over one of these roads leading to it. Trees, of course, stand along these highways."

"On August 8, 1923, the plaintiff, together with some friends, was driving on one of these roads by automobile. They had not been, nor were they then, guests at the hotel. They intended to apply for accommodation at the hotel and become guests there if received. The day was clear and calm. Suddenly, without any warning whatever, a tree standing on the lands of the defendant fell across the highway, struck the automobile in which the defendant and his friends were seated, damaged the car and injured the plaintiff, who was the owner of the car and who was at the time driving.

Prosecutor Charges Negligence
"The plaintiff has brought this action to recover from the hotel company damages to compensate him for the injuries he suffered and the loss of his machine. He charges that the accident which occurred to him was caused by negligence of the defendant. At the close of the plaintiff's testimony the court entered a nonsuit, and we now have this motion to remove that nonsuit."

"The tree which fell was about thirty feet in height and stood ten feet from the edge of the highway on which the plaintiff was driving. It was driving on one of these roads by

AUTO IS WRECKED AT TWO TAVERNS; VICTIM IS DYING

Man Deserted by Companions Along Roadside and Passing Motorists Pick Him Up.

With an injury to his spine which has left him paralyzed from the waist down, J. Leo McCalley, 40, of Harrisburg, said to be a newspaperman, is in a critical condition at the Warner Hospital as a result of an automobile accident at Two Taverns, early this morning.

Two other occupants of the machine, a large touring car, said to have been driven by McCalley, are reported to have bled profusely and to have been given medical attention in Littlestown. Their names were not learned.

Except for the spinal injury, McCalley was unscathed. The accident is reported to have occurred about 1 o'clock this morning, but the injured man was not admitted to the local hospital until 5 o'clock. He was brought in by a touring party from Shamokin, who told hospital authorities they found him along the side of the road. Physicians say his recovery is extremely doubtful, and if he lives, he will likely be paralyzed the rest of his life.

The accident is said to have resulted from fast driving, and the high-powered car is reported to be almost at total wreck. It struck a wingwall of the bridge at Two Taverns, but remained on the road.

The accident was reported to the state police, and Trooper Robenolt investigated. At noon, he said he was unable to learn the identity of the two men in the machine at the time of the accident, although he said he had learned they were given treatment for their injuries in Littlestown, but by whom he did not know.

The state policeman said he had visited McCalley at the hospital, but that the injured man was unable to throw any light on the identity of his companions. McCalley, according to the officer, was so badly injured that his mind is almost a blank, and that it was all but impossible to secure any further details of the accident from him.

Owner of Car Unconcerned
An investigation of the accident by the state police has revealed that J. Ross Simonetti, Harrisburg, is the owner of the machine, and a charge of reckless driving has been laid (Continued on Second Page)

BOY IS KILLED ON G-BURG ROAD

Loses His Life As He Tries to "Hop" Truck At White Hill.

Floyd Bailets, 17, a senior at the Lemoyne High School and the son of Elmer Bailets, tax collector there, was crushed under the wheels of a truck and instantly killed on White Hill.

A coroner's jury Sunday absolved Milton Ellenmaker, of New Cumberland, the truck driver, of all blame in the youth's death. The inquest was held in the office of District Attorney Myers in Lemoyne, with Burgess Hamilton presiding in the absence of Coroner Pepper, of Cumberland county.

Bailets met his death when he tried to board the truck to go home as it passed a pool room on the Gettysburg pike at White Hill. He lost his hold on the handle of the door of the truck and fell to the roadway the rear wheel of the heavy vehicle crushing his skull.

More Than 2,000 Ministers Turned Out At Lutheran Theological Institution Here In Century Of Activities.

Plans have been completed for exercises marking the graduation of the one hundredth class from the Lutheran Theological Seminary here.

With a record of having graduated more than 2,000 ministers, many of whom became prominent in the Lutheran denomination, the seminary is planning an elaborate centennial exposition in September, commemorating the founding of the institution one hundred years ago.

Coincidentally, there were 13 students enrolled in the seminary's first class, and there are exactly that number to be graduated this month.

Give Diplomas May 20

Diplomas will be given to the graduates at a service to be held Wednesday evening, May 20, at Christ Lutheran church here, when the Rev. Dr. J. S. Simon, Hagerstown, Maryland, father of one of the members of the class, will give the commencement address.

The father of another member of the class, the Rev. Dr. R. B. Feery, Wooster, Ohio, will preach the annual alumni sermon May 19, at the seminary chapel.

The building which first housed the seminary, founded by the Rev. Dr. S.

S. Schmucker, and a group of friends, still stands at the corner of South Washington and West High streets.

Outgrowing the old equipment six years after the founding, the seminary was transferred to new buildings on Seminary avenue in 1832, the first building at the present location serving both as a dormitory and as a recitation hall. The staff of professors has been extended to six.

WOMAN INJURED IN AUTO CRASH

"Hit-And-Run" Maryland Car Leaves Victim Along Road, Near Abbottstown.

One woman was seriously injured when two automobiles collided on the Abbottstown-Hanover road at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Murray Miller, of near Westminster, suffered a fractured shoulder, fractured ribs and possible internal injuries, when the car, driven by her husband, turned over twice, after being sideswiped.

The other machine, which is alleged by residents of Abbottstown to have been responsible for the accident, contained a man and a woman. After the accident, the couple stopped, examined the extent of the damage to their own machine and started away, without assisting the occupants of the Miller machine.

The pair is said to have been riding in a light coupe bearing Maryland license plates. The license number of the car was not secured. Hanover police were notified to be on the look-out for the coupe, which was not damaged to any considerable extent by the crash, but the driver apparently turned off the main road before reaching that place, for he was not apprehended.

Besides Mrs. Miller, her husband and their four children were in the machine at the time. One girl, aged about 11, suffered a badly cut arm, and Miller, the driver, also received numerous cuts and bruises.

Dr. W. F. Hollinger, Abbottstown, was called to the scene of the accident, and treated the injured, after which they were taken to their home.

BRITAIN FACES A GREAT CRISIS IN LABOR STRIKE

Two Million And Half Men To Be Idle By Tonight Under General Walk-out Order.

(By Associated Press.) London, May 3.—Great Britain is faced at midnight tonight by the gravest domestic menace which has hung over the nation since fall of the Stuart dynasty.

This is a general strike which is estimated will call out immediately 1,405,000 men to join the 1,120,000 coal miners already on strike.

The crisis culminated early this morning when it was officially announced by the government that its negotiations with the trade union congress in an endeavor to prevent a walk-out of the workers in various trades had broken down. The announcement said the government would decline to reopen negotiations unless the congress withdrew its order for a general strike and repudiated other alleged overt acts which were described as challenging the constitutional right and freedom of the nation.

On behalf of the workers it was declared that their efforts "to obtain an honorable settlement had been wrecked by the government's unprecedented ultimatum."

At midnight tonight the general strike is to begin with the tying up of all transport services, except those dealing with food stuffs and several other industries. While it seems apparent that some unions will not immediately join the walkout, it is understood 410,000 railroad men, 60,000 railway clerks, 300,000 builders, 330,000 transport workers, 60,000 seamen, 120,000 printers, 100,000 iron workers and 25,000 electricians will stop work.

Establish Wartime Rations
A system of rationing similar to that of wartime will be established by the government especially as regards fuel and light.

The government today opened stations where private citizens may enroll as volunteers in the public service. Everybody has been invited to lend a hand. Numerous men and women volunteered yesterday and it is said large numbers of them already are enrolled.

To meet the emergency, the government has made elaborate preparations. The country is divided into ten districts each under a civil commissioner. It follows that the trade unions' proposal to run food trains will not be considered.

"The work of looking after the nation is the government's work," said an official today. "Any one who wishes to assist is perfectly entitled to do so, but only as a private citizen and under the direction of the various civil commissioners."

HOLD INDIANA
VOTE TUESDAY

Primaries to be Held Tomorrow With World Court an Issue on Republican Side.

Indianapolis, May 3.—Two Republican United States Senators who voted against American participation in the World Court have submitted their judgment to a jury of the electorate in the Indiana primary election Tuesday. James E. Watson, of Rushville, and Arthur R. Robinson, of Indianapolis, are candidates for nomination.

Through the death of Senator Samuel M. Ralston, a Democrat, Indiana will elect two Senators this fall. Robinson, appointed to Ralston's place, seeks to retain his seat during the remainder of the term, which expires in 1929. Watson is running for the full six-year term.

14 Candidates In Race

On only one other occasion has the Hoosier state named two Senators at the same election. In 1916 Watson defeated Tom Taggart, appointed to succeed Ben Shively, who had died in office. That year Harry S. New, now Postmaster-General, also was elected over John Kern, a Democrat, who sought re-election.

Seven Republicans and as many Democratic candidates are entered. Opposing Watson is Claris Adams, former Marion county prosecutor. Robinson has four opponents, Arch G. Graham, of South Bend; Oswald Ryan, of Anderson; Ward B. Hiner, and James R. Norrell, a negro physician, of Indianapolis.

Six Democrats For Long Term

Six Democrats seek the right to oppose the winner of the Watson-Adams race. They are: William Cullup, Vincennes; George Rauch, Marion; Albert Stump, L. Ert Slack and L. William Curry, Indianapolis, and John E. Frederick, Kokomo. Cullup and Rauch formerly were members of the House of Representatives. Slack is a former federal district attorney. Evans Woolen, an Indianapolis banker, is unopposed for the Democratic short term nomination.

All of Indiana's thirteen members of the House of Representatives are standing for re-election. Three Democrats and two Republicans are unopposed.

Because of the number of Democrats in the long term Senatorial race and Republicans in the short term contest, there is a possibility that the choice of two candidates will be delayed until the party conventions in June. A majority vote is required at the primary to determine a candidate.

San Diego, Calif., May 3.—Explosion of a still he was operating aboard the destroyer John Francis Burns caused the death of Dewey C. Blyckert, a seaman. Blyckert was extracting alcohol from shellac when the blast occurred.

His death set in motion two investigations by naval authorities. Rear Admiral Frank Schofield ordered a probe to find out how many stills, if any, are operating in the destroyer force, and a naval court will convene today to investigate the explosion Friday which caused Blyckert's death.

Rear Admiral Schofield's investigation will seek to establish how widespread is the practice of manufacturing alcohol from shellac and other ship stores, he said.

PRICES REACT
ON THE MARKET

(By Associated Press.)

New York, May 3.—A sharp reaction in prices took place at the opening of today's stock market presumably on selling inspired by the British labor crisis. Initial declines averaged 1 to 2 points.

The first outbreak of selling carried prices of many popular issues down nearly 5 points, but strong buying support quickly developed and a good sized rally was underway at the end of the first hour. Later, fresh selling broke out in all quarters followed by a resumption of bear pressure against many issues. Call money opened at 3 1/2 per cent.

This road picks up traffic from three main-line highways, leading from Chambersburg, Gettysburg and York, the congestion occurring at an underpass of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Other Ministers to Preach This Week; Services Sunday Largely Attended.

Meetings at the evangelistic services being conducted in the new auditorium at Fourth and Hanover streets were largely attended Sunday.

The Rev. John A. Tabor, evangelist, lectured at the service at 2:30 Sunday afternoon on the theme, "From Gettysburg to the Golden Gate of California; from Gettysburg to the Golden Gate of New Jerusalem."

The text for the evening sermon was taken from Corinthians, "Behold, I show unto you a more excellent way." Five persons went forward and confessed conversion.

A special program has been arranged for this week, it is announced, with services each evening. Doctor Tabor will preach tonight. Tuesday night, Rev. F. L. Stine, pastor of the United Brethren church, will preach; Wednesday and Thursday nights, Rev. William F. Kohler, of Thurmont, and Friday night, Reverend Agge, of York. There will be no services Saturday night.

Twenty singers from Harrisburg, comprising the choir of the Fourth Street Christian church, sang at the services Sunday afternoon. Several visiting choirs from other cities will attend this week, it is announced. Mr. and Mrs. Christy sang at Waynesboro at 11 a. m. Sunday and at St. James Lutheran church, here, at 6:30 in the evening. The Christys are residing while in Gettysburg at the home of Charles Sheads, 203 Hanover street, where they can be communicated with if their services are desired.

Here and There in Pennsylvania

Pennsylvania's big show, the Sesqui-centennial Exposition in celebration of the 150th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, is beginning to attract attention at home.

Although many foreign countries and the state government began plans a long time ago, it was only recently that the people of the smaller communities began to evidence real interest. Now they are talking about it. Clinton county is one of the latest, and Mayor Allen Sterner of Lock Haven is responsible. He proposes that his county send an exhibit and he has been after the leaders of the county's leading industries to get busy.

These are housecleaning days and the backyards, city and country, are proof of it. But the housecleaning methods of the present are not those of a generation ago.

Where once the whacking of rugs resounded on the spring air, the purr of electric cleaners now may be heard. The modern methods are not confined to the cities, either. In rural sections, where power lines have been extended, the housewives are using labor saving devices and the small boy finds himself called upon less and less to wield the old carpet beater.

A flock of chickens and a pile of hot ashes—result, a woodland fire which cost about $14 to extinguish. The chickens got in the ashes and started scratching. The sparks flew and the fire started. The fire warden in the Schuylkill forest district reported the circumstances to the department of forests and waters at Harrisburg.

Whether or not the chickens burned their feet was not reported. Officials in the department, who had the job of handling the reports, said they hoped so.

The days of pitching quoits are coming back—at least in the Lehigh coal region.

A revival of the sport in that section has produced a league with a regular schedule of games for the coming summer and fall. The schedule is in two parts and the winner will meet in a decisive series.

Years ago quoit pitching or horse-shoe pitching as it was called then was a leading sport among the miners. The horsehoes gave way to the modern quoit, however, and now the game is played on well laid out courts.

Radio has scored another victory by removing the isolation of persons stationed in the state's fire towers. These usually are on high mountains in lonely places and visitors are few and far between.

Miss Marguerite Parsons and Miss Henrietta S. Zacharias, "lookout ladies" at the Looy mountain tower near Alexandria find radio a great dispeller of loneliness. They told officials of the state department of forests and waters they advised other watchers to "get in line."

against the Harrisburger by Trooper Robenolt.

Long distance telephone communication with the home of Simonetti brought the response that "nothing is known of the accident." It was stated that Simonetti is confined to bed, and state police believe that he was an occupant or the driver of the machine and that he was so badly injured also that it has been necessary for him to go to bed.

Since the injuries suffered by McCally are such that did not bleed, state police are agreed that the other two occupants of the car were also seriously hurt and bled profusely. Passing motorists are believed by the authorities to have taken the other two occupants of the machine back to Harrisburg.

Miss Nobody

Published by arrangement with First National Pictures Inc.

"And you suppose right," said Bravo. "If the fools had any brains they would have discovered that long ago. And let me warn you, my young romantic friend, not to be a feminist in pants. Some day you will find yourself paying off the taxi driver while the guy who chucked her under the chin is kissing the girl good-night."

"You, no doubt," jeered Barbara, "are a chin chucker."

"I am," grandly corrected Bravo, "a cigar smoker."

"Not," he added, "that I can't do my chucking on occasion—when the chin is dimpled—or the tobacco is dry."

Barbara closed her ears and, dejected, let the monologist talk on. A dozen times in the course of the dinner she had forcibly established conversational subjects remote from topic A. But the ladies had come back like lost cats.

She toyed disconsolately with the twin to Bravo's cigar and blew a martyr mouthful. She grew aware of a hiatus in the monologue. She looked up to find Bravo's eyes absent and followed his gaze.

A woman was dining alone at a nearby table. She smiled over a coffee cup. And the smile was an engraved invitation.

"With R. S. V. P. in her eyes," thought Barbara. Grudgingly she admitted that the woman was passable.

She looked up to see Bravo's eyes absent and followed his gaze.

"A full and rounded creation," observed Bravo. "A siren born, young man, if you get what I mean. Eh?"

"Oh, all right for a hick, Jason," said Barbara.

"What makes you so hard-boiled about the ladies?" he asked.

"They bore me," she said. He laughed. She leaned forward intently. "You think I know nothing about them? Well, suppose I told you that I lived with a woman once—for years?"

"I'd say you're mighty precocious," he retorted. "Was she pretty?"

"She was a whole lot prettier than this one that you can't keep your eyes off," said Barbara warmly.

"You must tell me about it some time, you little rascal," he said absently. Her heart sank. She knew the symptoms. She tried to master rage and sorrow.

"How could she be the jealous of this table d'hôte hussy who so brazenly charmed him? The dirt was merely exercising her birthright. And Barbara had sold hers."

The siren rose and undulated out, with a flash of her teeth for Bravo.

"I wonder if you could find some way to amuse yourself for the next two hours," he said suddenly.

"I can, assuredly," she said. "As a matter of fact, I've got a date."

"What? When did you make a date?"

"A second ago," she said boldly. "Didn't you see her smile at me?" He burst into laughter.

"You little egotist! Smile at YOU? Don't be silly. She's old enough to be your mother. The lady smiled at me."

"It seems to me," she snapped, "that it's you who's the egotist. Suppose she did smile at you? What does that signify?"

"That," said Bravo, "signifies that I'm going to loaf out on the porch—the moon, my lad, being in the goofy stage—and strike up what I trust may become an ardent friendship with a bewitcher."

And leave me here—

"To pay the check," he finished blandly. He tossed a greenback on the table. "You can tell the waiter to keep the change."

She made a last attempt. She grinned—a crooked grin:

"Have another cigar?" she piped. He looked down at her with laugh in his eyes.

"No, thanks," he drawled. "The tobacco is dry."

He left her and strolled out, with not so much as one backward glance.

Disconsolate she sat alone.

The waiter came and she paid the check. She walked out on the porch. They were together at one end of the long veranda. She heard Bravo's voice:

"Yes, Miss Raleigh, I've been to Nice often. A city of colored shadows—"

It hadn't taken him long. She approached and affected agreeable surprise.

"Oh, hello Bravo!" she chirped. He returned a vicious look. "Hello," he said shortly. Barbara calmly sat down on the porch railing.

"A lovely evening," she observed. "A night made for—"

"Romance," giggled Miss Raleigh. "Mr. Kohler was just telling me about Nice. Mr. Kohler has traveled all over the world, he tells me."

"Well, I've traveled quite a bit, myself," smiled Barbara.

Bravo growled in her ear: "Travel now, you damned butterfly!" She ignored him severely.

"Won't you introduce me to your charming friend?" asked Barbara sweetly. The charming friend giggled. "I know it's rather unconventional—"

"One can't be conventional with a moon like this," giggled Miss Raleigh. "Do introduce your friend, Mr. Kohler."

"Miss Raleigh, Mr. Brown," said Bravo with poor grace. "And I can assure you that at the moment, my friend is distinctly a blot on an otherwise perfect nightcape."

"Flatterer!" murmured Miss Raleigh.

"Mr. Kohler," said Barbara, smiling winningly at her, "is distinctly a monopolist."

"Yes," she smiled vaguely. "And what business are you in?"

"I'm a motion picture actor," said Barbara calmly. She winced as Bravo, in the dark, kicked her in the shin. "You remind me so much of Nita Naldi!"

"Oh, do you know her?"

"Played opposite her once."

"In what picture?"

"Love Will Find a Way," said Barbara.

Bravo spat.

"And you think I look like Nita Naldi?" breathed Miss Raleigh. "That's most remarkable. All my friends tell me the same thing. I've some photographs in my room, taken in Spanish costume. I really do think, in the photos, there is a resemblance."

"I'd love to see them," cooed Barbara.

The lady left and Bravo raged: "Why didn't you run off and see a movie or something? You've got an awful call, hounding in like that."

"We're partners, aren't we?" she demanded.

"Sure. But not when it comes to women. It isn't ethical. Why don't you run around town and get somebody your own size?"

"I like this one," she insisted stubbornly. She felt in her pocket and drew out her lucky dime. "Are you a good sport?"

"It has heads on both sides," he accused, his humor restored by her impertinence.

"Come on," dared Barbara. "Heads!" called Bravo. They bent and looked.

"You lose," said Barbara. "Now you run along—and see a movie."

She was alone when Miss Raleigh returned with her album.

"Here it is," she turned the pages. "Now this picture—"

Barbara interrupted.

"There's a little square down the avenue a bit," she wooed. "I noticed it as I strolled by earlier this evening. In the luck it looked like a corner of the old park at Fontainebleau. Let's go there and see your pictures by the moonlight."

Barbara took Miss Raleigh's arm tenderly and guided her on to the gravel.

The amateur lady killer thought back to her single experience with Nita of Newburgh. An entirely different specimen, she warned herself. She wondered how she might handle this one. She pondered the various systems she had heard discussed among the hoboes on the freight train.

Mr. Doeth had been most nearly right. She considered his counsel: "Woman is moody. Fit you to her mood, and she's yours."

What was Miss Raleigh's mood? One guess. The flirtatious.

"Would you have minded," asked Barbara, "if, when you came down from your room, you had found me gone, and my friend waiting for you?"

Miss Raleigh giggled: "I don't know what you mean."

"Well, I mean this," said Barbara, with Byronic melancholy. "Would you rather have me here, to look at your album, than home?"

"I think you're a sweet boy," said Miss Raleigh. "There's something different about you. I noticed it the moment you entered the dining room. Of course I noticed Mr. Kohler, too. Who wouldn't? But when I smiled it was for you."

Barbara heartily wished that Bravo might have been present to hear.

They were in the park. They found a secluded bench and sat. Miss Raleigh opened the album and began to confess her photographic past.

"I wonder what her mood is?" thought Barbara.

She acted on swift impulse. She leaned over and planted a kiss on the charmer's neck.

Miss Raleigh, when Barbara had done, started away in surprise.

"Mr. Brown!"

"Call me Bob," said Barbara calmly.

"I—Bob," said Miss Raleigh. "What made you do that?"

Barbara pointed to the picture.

"Carmen wouldn't have asked that," she reproved. "Carmen would have understood. Carmen would have known—"

"What?" Miss Raleigh arched her brows eagerly.

"When you smiled in the dining room," said Barbara, "your smile reached into my soul. I thought it was not for me."

"And you were jealous?"

"Yes." Here at last Barbara spoke some truth. "I was jealous. Dreadfully jealous."

LOCAL HI BEATS BALTIMORE POLY

Reynoldsman Win Second Game of the Week; Tennant Holds Visitors to Three Hits.

Gettysburg High won their second game of the week when they defeated Baltimore Poly Saturday afternoon on the Playground to the tune of 7-3. The weather was ideal for baseball and as a consequence the game was well played. The first five innings was a pitching duel between Tennant and White. In the last of the fifth the local team pushed over four runs with a terrific offensive attack with two out.

The Maroon and White boys obtained eleven safe walks while Tennant held Baltimore to three hits. Cox and Gilbert each hit for the circuit. The victory was the high school team's fifth of the season and was the first jolt for Baltimore Poly.

Play by Play

Walton led off for Baltimore and sent a short fly to Myers. King was safe when D. Bream booted his grounder. Cox caught hold of one of Tennant's fast ones and sent a long drive over Knox's head in left for a home run, scoring King ahead of him. Rethshulte struck out. D. Bream took R. Ott's pop fly. Gilbert fanned to start the home half. Rosenberg threw Weikert out. D. Bream sent a beautiful single to center. Knox rolled out, Cox to Ott.

Baltimore fell in order in the second. Hall sent a low liner to right, Gibbs making a fine running catch. Everett whiffed. Rosenberg popped to D. Bream.

Tennant got a Texas leaguer behind second and immediately stode second. Myers struck out. Utz shot a liner to short and Cox doubled Tennant off second.

White struck out. Walton flied to Knox. King struck out.

W. Bream walked in the home half. Gibbs forced Bream at second, Rosenberg to King. Gilbert drew a pass putting Gibbs on second. Weikert and D. Bream skied to Everett in right.

Cox struck out. Rethshulte rolled out, Gilbert to Utz. Ott fouled out to Utz.

Knox walked. Tennant forced Knox. Knox stole second and went to third on a passed ball. Tennant hit one to Rosenberg and Knox was trapped between third and home. Knox was run down, Hall getting the putout. Tennant went to second on the play. Rosenberg tossed out Myers. Utz retired on strikes.

Gilbert threw out both Hall and Everett. Rosenberg hit a long triple to left, but was caught sleeping a minute later by Myers, who held the peg and touched Rosenberg as he stepped off the bag.

With two away in the last of the fifth the locals pushed four runs over. W. Bream watched the third strike sail by. King tossed out Gibbs. Gilbert hit a long high fly to deep right and Everett failed to get under it, the ball rolling far out in right. Gilbert circled the paths for high school's first run. Weikert sent a pretty single to center. D. Bream lashed a triple to left scoring Weikert. Knox doubled to deep center, Bream crossing. Tennant doubled to center and Knox counted. Myers ended the inning by fanning.

White was safe on D. Bream's error. Walton fouled out to Weikert. King forced White, Myers to Gilbert. Gilbert took Rethshulte's grounder.

Carroll replaced White in the box for Baltimore. Utz struck out. King tossed out Bream. Gibbs singled to right, but was left stranded as Gilbert popped to Ott.

Ott was called out on strikes. Gilbert threw out Hall. Everett was retired via the strikeout route.

Gettysburg added three more in their half. Weikert started with a pass. Weikert stole second. D. Bream sent a long fly to Everett in right, who muffed it, Weikert scoring and Bream going to second. Knox doubled to left scoring Bream. Tennant singled to center scoring Knox. Tennant was caught off first, Hall to Ott. Myers whiffed. Utz skied to left.

Baltimore shoved a run over in the eighth. Perkins who had relieved Carroll walked. Carroll who was now playing center, skied to Knox. Walton struck out and Perkins stole second. King shot a single to center, Perkins scoring. Cox fouled out to Weikert.

John Sadler was sent in to bat for W. Bream and was called out for failing to report. Gibbs singled to center. Bowers batted for Gilbert and fanned. Weikert also struck out.

Rethshulte fouled out to Utz. Ott struck out. Hall drew a pass. Everett was tossed out by Tennant, ending the game.

was a dead tree. The tree broke about six feet from the ground. At the place where it broke it was ten inches in diameter. After it had fallen it was found that the stump was partly hollow, that an insect, presumably a wasp, had bored into it. There was nothing before the fall to indicate that wasps had bored into it or that the tree was partly hollow or decayed.

It was covered with bark. There was no evidence before us from which a jury could find that an examination of the tree before the fall would have revealed any defect or decay in it. It was argued by the plaintiff that, as the tree was dead, it was, therefore, knowingly likely to fall, and it was the duty of the defendant to remove the tree, simply because it was dead. We cannot agree that the death of a tree renders it dangerous and unsafe for persons to be under it or near it.

Any one who has knowledge of timber or trees or timberlands knows very well that a dead tree is not, simply because it is dead, any more likely to fall than a living tree.

"The defendant, by opening the road and maintaining the hotel and place of accommodation, invited the public to enter and travel upon that road. They did not by that become guarantors of their safety. They owed to the public ordinary care. Of course, it is the duty to them to remove from that road or the sides of it any or all obstructions which by ordinary means they could determine might likely fall on those traveling there. They were not bound to make a microscopic examination of each tree to ascertain its condition."

"The motion to dismiss the nonsuit is denied."

Hear Mrs. Pinchot At Dillsburg Church

The Lutheran church at Dillsburg, York county, with a seating capacity of almost 1,000 people, was filled Sunday afternoon to hear Mrs. Cornelia Bryce Pinchot make an address on "Christian Citizenship."

Mrs. Pinchot, after speaking of the "reverence and humbleness that filled her because she was in a church," made plain "the Christian duty of every citizen to uphold the best and by power of will to promote good will on earth."

At the request of members of the W. C. T. U., under whose auspices the affair was held, Mrs. Pinchot ended her address with a description of law enforcement.

Mrs. David S. Fry, in behalf of the W. C. T. U., presented Mrs. Pinchot with a large bouquet of yellow roses. Mrs. Hartman, local president, conducted the service with the Rev. Mr. Livingstone, pastor of the church, in charge of devotionals. The choir rendered special music. A luncheon was served at the home of Mrs. Lehmyer in honor of Mrs. Pinchot and Mrs. Maude Wierman Kennedy after the service.

Mrs. Pinchot sent Charles Spertzel, who had walked ten miles to hear her speak, to his home in her car.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Gray Bigham and son, Franklin, of Biglerville; Mrs. Charles Knox, president of the W. C. T. U., of Gettysburg, and Mrs. Marie A. Zeigler, of Gettysburg, with a party of friends, attended the service.

Woman Scorned

The fury of a woman scorned was blamed for the shooting of Allen Davis, New York actor, by his pretty bride, Edith Parker Davis, as the actress was placed on trial for assault upon recovery of Davis from his bullet wounds.

At a meeting of the directors of the Adams county baseball league held here Friday evening a decision was handed down in which the controversy over the protested game at New Oxford last Saturday with the Pennville team was settled in favor of the Pennville team, which had won the game, 9 to 4. The game was played under protest after the umpire had refused to call the game following a heavy rainfall which inundated the field. A protest was entered because Cromer, the Pennville pitcher, had used resin on the ball.

The resin bag was discussed at the meeting and it was decided that it will be used in accordance with the official rules permitting such use. The league will supply resin bags to the umpires as soon as they can be secured. Five directors from the Pennville team were present, as follows: Curvin Godd, William J. Willet, Paul Yingling, Milton Pottorff and George Wise.

Gettysburg College track team defeated Bucknell at Lewisburg Saturday afternoon, 66 to 59. High scores were made for Gettysburg by Jones, Bender and Carte. Bender was especially good in the sprints. He is a freshman and participated in his first track events for Gettysburg Saturday, having become eligible under college rules only a week ago. Gettysburg won all the running events.

GETTYSBURG EASY FOR ARENDTSTVILLE

Some Big Scores Are Piled up in Adams County League Games Saturday; Biglerville Wins.

Arendtville made the Gettysburg aggregation in the Adams County Baseball League look like a bunch of sandlotters in a game on the Arendtville grounds Saturday afternoon—the first official game of the season there—when the apple knockers strutted their stuff at a 15 to 2 clip.

It wasn't an accident, either, for Arendtville came to Gettysburg the Saturday previous and took the opener from the Gettysburg bunch to the tune of 8 to 5.

Of the four games scheduled in the Adams County League, Saturday afternoon, only one, that clash between the Littlestown and Biglerville teams at Littlestown, was what might be termed a closely contested game. It was won by Biglerville by a score of 8 to 7, but this result was not decided until eleven innings had been played through, the teams having been tied at the end of the ninth.

In the other games New Oxford scored its first victory of the season by a 10 to 1 count, downing Pennville, while McSherrystown was riding rough-shod over Midway, 18 to 3, and Arendtville was winning from Gettysburg by a 15 to 2 count.

Harrisburg Academy lost its first baseball game of the season Saturday to the Gettysburg Academy team at Gettysburg by the score of 8 to 4. Lefty Haas twirled good ball for the Harrisburg team and yielded seven hits but the poor support of his mates aided his defeat. The Harrisburg Academy team got to Black for nine hits.

Gettysburg scored three runs in the second frame on two singles and on one error. The Harrisburg team came back in the third frame and scored two runs. With two runners on base Michlovitz hit for the circuit but the umpire called him out for failing to touch second base.

Wetzler's hitting featured for Gettysburg. He hit for a four base blow in the fifth frame with a runner on base.

The Boys' Band of the Paradise Protectors, near Abbottstown, was on the grounds. McSherrystown has the proud honor of being the pennant-winning team for the two seasons which the Adams County League has been in existence.

Just Folks

LIFE

If life held nothing more
Than laughter and mirth and love,
A welcoming kiss at the door
And the skies, with the stars above,
An occasional hour of peace,
When the striving and jarring cease,
We should still press on through the years
In spite of their pain and their tears.

If life held only these:
The voice of a little child,
The touch of a summer breeze,
The roar of a tempest wild,
The fleeting charm of a dream,
A garden, a running stream,
In spite of the cares which pile,
It would still be a thing worth while.

But shining above it all,
The beauty of earth and sky,
The laughter of children small,
The friends who are standing by,
Is the light of a love divine,
That strange and mysterious sign,
The death and the passing from earth
Is surely another birth.

Life holds for us, one and all,
A promise we strangely feel,
It throbs in the songbird's call,
It's a thing which the trees reveal;
We must pay for these hours of breath
With the absence that's known as death,
But shall rise in a nobler birth
Enriched by our stay on earth.

Little Jack Rabbit

by David Cory

"How do you know the wood frogs are shouting for happiness?" all of a sudden asked a voice, as the bunny boy hopped from the last story into this one. Looking up to see who was speaking, the little rabbit saw Professor Jim Crow, his Wisdom Book under his wing and his spectacles on his beak.

"Good morning," laughed the little bunny.

"In a few days the Wood Frogs will no longer croak and the Hylas will have ceased their peeping," said the old crow solemnly.

"Why?" asked the curious little rabbit.

"Because the Wood Frogs will have laid their eggs in the warming waters and gone back into the woods," answered that wise old bird.

"Hop over to the edge of the pond. Do you see that jelly-like mass as big as squash fastened to a twig about a foot below the surface of the water?"

"Yes, I do," answered the bunny boy, taking pains not to fall over head first.

"Those are the eggs of the green frog. No doubt you can find those of the wood frog and the hylas nearby."

"How do you know so much?" asked the amazed little rabbit.

"Because I have remembered much that I have seen, and have found out much that is hidden," answered Professor Jim Crow, with a wink, and off he flew.

"I might as well hop along," thought the little rabbit, and the next minute he came across Bobbie Redvest and his wife looking over a last year's nest in a willow over the water.

And the next minute Kingfisher sprang his rattle in short, vigorous calls, and the little rabbit saw this wonderful feathered fisherman, dressed in a bluish gray suit, with a belt of the same color across his white breast. The dark crest on his head gave him quite a fierce look, and his large, heavy bill a splendid tool with which to catch fish.

Back and forth he flitted outside the willows, until, with a sudden dive, he splashed into the water and came out again with a perch in his mouth, which he carried up to the limb of a birch tree and, rapping its head against the wood to kill it, gulped it down.

"You had some trouble to swallow that fish," laughed the little rabbit.

"The sharp fins stuck in my throat. I thought I'd never get his tail down," answered Kingfisher.

"Where is Mrs. Kingfisher?" asked the little rabbit, bent on finding out all he could this lovely May morning.

"I'm looking for her," answered the feathered fisherman, and with a loud call, like the sound of a watchman's rattle, he went over the hill. Again and again he sounded his call, clattering like an alarm clock, and the little rabbit, curious to learn whether he would find her, waited in the silence of the little cove fringed with alders and maples until Mr. Merry Sun, on his early morning climb up the bright blue sky, turned the spicebushes into a yellow blaze and the maple blooms that Billy Breeze had scattered over the surface of the pond into little, shining crimson islands.

"Where is Mrs. Kingfisher?"

"I'm happy that I came out so early," laughed the bunny boy.

"So am I," all of a sudden answered a voice, and in the next story you shall hear who agreed with our little rabbit.

portance of having Adams county assist in the nomination of a Republican ticket for which there will be no apology necessary in the campaign to elect in November.

"The candidates for which this committee and its assistants will work all are men of outstanding ability, unselfish in their desires to serve the people of Pennsylvania, and backed up by enviable records of honest and fearless performance of duty in their respective services to the people and the state.

"Senator Pepper possesses unusual ability for the office of United States Senator. He weighs well all questions which come to him for solution. He comes to conclusion after careful thought and analysis. He is not governed by personal ambitions. He is not visionary. He does not play upon the appetites of men in order to get their votes.

"Hon. John S. Fisher, for Governor, has served his state well. As a State Senator, he was made chairman of a committee to investigate the Capitol graft. That committee made a report upon the basis of which indictments were brought against the wrong-doers and convictions and punishments followed. At a later date he was made banking commissioner and his administration in that connection brought banking business to a high plane of efficiency and honesty.

"Mr. Fisher among his home folks is known as 'Honest John.' He is a man of strong convictions with quiet courage to adhere to them. His official record does not now, neither will it in November, require an apology. It is his best asset. He will not be imposed upon by unscrupulous lobbyists and politicians.

"Col. Ernest G. Smith has not been tried in civil officialdom. It is sufficient to say that from a military slant his service to his country is good reason why he should be recompensed with the honor of being nominated and elected Lieutenant Governor.

"Hon. James F. Woodward, for Secretary of Internal Affairs, has served in that capacity with fidelity. Hampered by a very limited appropriation, he patiently worked on and kept his department functioning with credit to himself and the purposes of that department.

"These candidates compose a ticket which is recommended to the Republicans of the state by the Hon. Andrew W. Mellon, Pennsylvania's honored contribution to President Coolidge's cabinet. Secretary Mellon has established the reputation of being the greatest Secretary of the Treasury since Alexander Hamilton's time. He has been instrumental in reducing federal taxes while paying off the national debt. He is a firm believer in Coolidge and his type of Republicanism. This can not be said of all who hold themselves out as Republicans. It is, therefore, important that Pennsylvania, the bulwark of Republicanism, should register its approval of the type of Republicanism which is advocated by Mr. Mellon and exemplified by his chief, the president of the United States, so that other sections of the nation will not misunderstand the quality of Pennsylvania Republicanism.

What Are You Doing For Your Puny Child?

One boy gained 11 pounds in 7 weeks and is now strong and healthy.

For weak, frail, under-developed children—and especially those that have rickets, and need a sure builder that promotes the growth of teeth and bones, cod liver oil is the one medicine supreme—nothing helps like it.

But it is nasty and repulsive and evil smelling and nearly always upsets children's stomachs—so now up-to-date chemists advise McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets.

Children love them as they do candy, because they are sugar coated and easy to take. One boy gained 11½ pounds in seven weeks, and is now healthy and happy—thousands of other children have grown strong and robust.

Sixty tablets for 60 cents at People's Drug Store and all druggists—but be sure and ask for McCoy's—the original and genuine.

Give them to the sickly, frail child for 30 days, and if they don't help—wonderfully, your druggist is authorized to hand you back the money you paid for them. Adv.

"The same policy of honesty, economy and unselfishness as governs the federal administration should likewise prompt candidates for state office. Good government with economy in its administration, does not mix with personal ambitions and selfish greed for power. For these very reasons Mr. Mellon recommends the ticket which our committee is backing.

"The issue for Republicans to decide is: Shall the beer mug and the iron collar of Varemism coupled with the selfish desire to exploit the 'administrative code' by those who have 'hitched their kite to the star' of Varemism be the guidance of Republican voters on May 18; or shall Republicanism of the Coolidge-Mellon type be their conclusion when the ballot is cast?"

RUPTURE SHIELD EXPERT HERE

E. J. Meinhardt, the well known Expert from Chicago, will personally be at the Brunswick Hotel, Lancaster, Pa., on Tuesday, May 4th, and at the Colonial Hotel, York, Pa., on Wednesday, May 5th, from 9:00 a. m. to 5:00 p. m.

Mr. Meinhardt says "The Vacuum Rupture Shield" will not only hold the opening in thirty days on the average case—usually giving instantaneous relief withstanding all strain regardless of the size and location of the Rupture.

WARNING: Do not expose yourself to the danger of wearing old-style trusses with understraps. These trusses usually place the pad on the lump and not on the rupture opening. This often causes strangulation which usually necessitates an immediate surgical operation or results in sudden death. "The Vacuum Rupture Shield" has no understraps, no straps around the body or legs. It is also perfectly sanitary and practically indestructible, and should be worn while bathing. Only gentlemen are invited to call at this time as a special visit will be made here later for women and children.

Notice: "The Vacuum Rupture Shield" can not be fitted by mail. Every case must be seen personally. Please note the above dates and hours carefully. Strictly no charge for demonstration. Address all correspondence to E. J. Meinhardt Co., Whitehall, Michigan.—adv.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

ACORNS

AN ACORN is a simple thing as you pick it up and handle it. It doesn't look very important.

But plant that acorn. Soon it gets restless, breaks its shell and sends deep into the earth the hidden and concentrated feeling of all its life. Its roots keep reaching, reaching, and getting ready to support the great growth that in a few years makes the mighty oak which shelters, standing so strong.

We are always planting acorns. Our thoughts, our ideas, our little thoughtfulnesses. These are acorns. And we never know how somebody else is going to be benefited and made rich from what we plant in his or her heart.

Many criticize us and ask us the use of planting in soil that looks barren and useless. But you never know about soil until you have tested it.

You can X-ray people's ribs and their working organs, but you can't X-ray people's feelings, people's hearts.

You needn't mind about where you plant your acorns. You just want to be sure the acorns are good and sound before you plant them.

How small acorns are—how great and strong the old oaks! Perhaps we long will be forgotten after our little acorns have been planted and grown to usefulness. But that will mean that we have been of use. And that is the answer to life.

Whom men fear they hate, and whom they hate, they wish dead. —Ennius.

Hope against hope, and ask till ye receive. —Montgomery.

'Tis the good reader that makes the good book. —Emerson.

HOW THE
PILGRIM MOTHER

Kept Her Family in Good Health

A statue to the Pilgrim Mother was recently unveiled at Plymouth Rock, Mass. Through her
we honor every pioneer woman who endured privation and hardships that a nation might live.
Shoulder to shoulder with her husband she built a home in the wilderness and reared her sturdy sons and daughters. She cooked and sewed family and when they were ill, she brewed potent remedies from roots and herbs—such roots and herbs as are now used in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

A Massachusetts woman writes:
"I was all run-down, with no ambition. I was tired all the time. Sometimes I would be in bed two or three days at a time, and the doctor would have to give me something to quiet me.
A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have had wonderful results from it. I felt better after taking the second bottle, and I am never without it in the house now. I have told lots of people about it, and they say it helps them, too. I am willing to answer letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. J. W. CRITCHETT, 2

JANE ADDAMS

WINSTON CHURCHILL

SIR GILBERT PARKER

HENRY MORGENTHAU

Miss Jane Addams, Chicago social worker, led a delegation of women asking President Coolidge to advocate the abolition of conscription and armaments. Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, demanded a tax on race track gambling in Britain. Sir Gilbert Parker, English novelist, arriving from Europe, congratulated Americans for staying out of the League of Nations. Henry Morgenthau, of New York, former United States Ambassador to Turkey, declared prohibition has degraded the morals of the people.

Glimpses Into Foreign Lands

Paris.—The deportation, after conviction for repeated swindles of a former captain in the French army, who won the cross of the Legion of Honor and Military Medal for valor on the field of battle, has brought to light a story of faithful devotion on the part of a woman, who shared the former officer's fortunes in his prosperous days.

A few hours before the hour fixed for the embarkment of the 340 convicts recently leaving aboard "La Martinique," a beautiful young woman, wearing a fine fur coat and most expensive pearl necklace, arrived at the gates of Saint Martin's penitentiary.

She applied to Governor Leroux for permission to marry her soldier sweetheart before his departure for Cayenne. This was refused according to the law, but she was informed that she might join her lover in exile. She took up her post behind a row of soldiers fifty yards from the lighter aboard which the convicts were embarking. When the former captain came into sight, her face went hard and set, as she shrieked above the roar of the breakers against the stone pier: "I will join you before six weeks."

The man, who had endured four years of trenches and open warfare with fortitude, staggered at the sound of the voice, halted, and wavered as if about to fall. Then with a look of love and gratitude, he squared his shoulders, and threw the girl a kiss. Then without hesitation he descended into the hold of the floating prison.

The first list of voluntary gifts to be devoted to liquidating France's floating debt has appeared in the Official Journal. It amounted to 4,608,851 francs (under 200 dollars), made up of sums varying from 1,000 francs sent by an Algerian to 2.10 from an anonymous donor. A Russian refugee sent 100 francs and the president of a club of war blinded veterans 170. A lady sent the Minister of Finance a heavy gold chain, saying she had no money.

A spinning mill owner has sent to the Island Revenue officer of his department a check for 3,000 francs representing an hour's work of his employees.

Deputy Father Lemire has forwarded M. Peret 100 francs from an aged Swiss woman, "French at heart."

No doubt 500 francs dramatically handed over to Finance Minister Peret by a deputy on the floor of the House will find its way on to this list. The deputy's example found no imitators at the moment, but the opinion is expressed that when M. Peret has constituted his propaganda committee for patriotic gifts, there will be a great response notwithstanding the fresh burden of taxation just laid on the country.

The oblivion of late years which had fallen on an artist, who once was among the most prominent in every salon, was explained this week when it was learned that he has become almost entirely blind.

Jean Boldini, who once commanded his own price for portraits, many of which adorn American homes, was seen at the exhibition of Jean Gabriel Domergue's paintings, being led by a young girl. The young guide told the octogenarian painter of the various canvases, on one occasion assuring him: "Here is a very fine portrait, Master, much like you used to paint."
